Dear friends,

On behalf of IUP’s alumni and the IUP Alumni Board of Directors, and on behalf of the IUP Ambassadors, it is our pleasure to invite all members of the Indiana area to join us for the many events planned for our annual homecoming weekend, as alumni, friends and community members celebrate IUP’s history and look forward to its promising future.

The IUP Ambassadors continue to be proud to offer the Kidz Karnival during the Pregame in the Oak Grove event, enjoying the opportunity to create memories for community children and for children of alumni returning for the weekend.

Graduates continue to have very fond memories of Indiana, and continued appreciation for the partnerships and hospitality that this community offers our students and visitors. IUP is proud to call Indiana County its home, and its students and alumni — be they near or far — are proud to be Indiana’s “adopted sons and daughters.”

Enjoy the weekend!

Sincerely,

Jim Wansacz
and Brianne Thomas

Indiana University of Pennsylvania’s Alumni Association includes all graduates of IUP. It is governed by a volunteer board of directors, and serving as president is Jim Wansacz, a 1994 graduate of IUP with a bachelor’s degree in business management and a minor in economics. Rep. Wansacz currently represents the 114th Legislative District (Lackawanna, Luzerne, Susquehanna and Wyoming counties) in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives. Wansacz, who lives in Old Forge, is beginning his ninth year as a member of the board of directors and his second term as president.

The Alumni Association aims to enrich the lives of its more than 115,000 alumni and build relationships to advance IUP. It creates outreach initiatives, both on and off campus, to increase involvement among alumni, cultivate relationships and strengthen alumni pride.

Brianne Thomas, of Homer City, a mathematics education major, is president of the IUP Ambassadors, the student-alumni volunteer group. The Ambassadors include 50 outstanding undergraduates who serve as liaisons with prospective students, current students, administrators, faculty, alumni and friends of the university. Over its 18-year history at IUP, the group has donated more than $125,000 to the university.

Students work for months planning floats

By NICOLE ROSER
nroser@indianagazette.net

The IUP Homecoming parade just wouldn’t be the same without the elaborate floats that stroll down the parade route each year.

Every homecoming, thousands are amazed by the floats, but do not realize the time, effort and money that has been put into making them.

Beginning in April, students and staff begin planning for the parade and thinking about float themes for the parade in October, according to Richard Kutz, vice president for student affairs and a parade chairman.

He said themes are then voted on and determined after considering how the theme will represent the university, and if it will be possible to construct floats based on the theme.

“A lot of themes revolve around cartoons, board games or video games,” Kutz said. “We try to think about what is manageable and what will look good.”

After months of preparation, the students finally begin building their floats, approximately two weeks before the homecoming festivities.

In addition to many hours spent on the construction of the float, he said participants do not receive financial support for the materials from the university, leaving them to pay for the cost by using their own membership funds.

Once they are finished, floats are judged and prizes are awarded to the top ones.

Although many floats are created by students involved in Greek organizations, he said all student organizations are invited to participate.

“This is a great opportunity that gets the students involved with the community,” Kutz said.

“Specifically, it helps to make a family-oriented event.”
Floats to feature classic video games

IUP News Service

This year's homecoming parade will feature a theme of "Classic Video Games."

The parade will start at 10 a.m. Saturday and will feature more than 70 campus and community units, including five floats that are part of the float competition: "Pac-Man," "Sonic the Hedgehog," "Donkey Kong," "Super Mario Bros." and "The Legend of Zelda."

The IUP Oak Grove will serve as the site of the Pregame in the Oak Grove Festival.

It is free and open to all members of the community.

The festival is scheduled from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and will include the Kidz Karnival, organized by the IUP Ambassadors student group.

The Karnival will feature a variety of children's events with cartoon characters, games, crafts and prizes.

Pregame in the Oak Grove also will offer food from different vendors throughout the region, music by marching bands from the parade, music by a disc jockey and the chance to have photos taken with the IUP cheerleaders and mascot Norm, the Crimson Hawk.

THE ROUTE

The parade will start at 13th and Philadelphia streets and travel east to Sixth and Philadelphia streets, south on Sixth Street to Church Street, west on Church Street to Oakland Avenue, and southwest on Oakland Avenue to 11th Street, where the parade will disband.

All motor-driven floats will continue southwest on Oakland Avenue to the Robertshaw building for disassembly.

A firing of the IUP department of military science's howitzer cannon near the Indiana County Court House will signal the start of the parade.

Immediately following the parade, more than 100 student volunteers from IUP's sororities and fraternities will work to clean up the parade route and Mack Park, where the floats are being constructed.

JUDGES

Judges for the float competition are Claire Hogan, of Indiana, a former Indiana Borough Council member; Michael Hood, dean of the College of Fine Arts; Beth Plakidas, an IUP student; and Sherry Renosky, an IUP alumna and marketing manager of the Indiana Mall.

Presentation of prizes for the float competition will be held in the Oak Grove at 11:45 a.m.

AWARDS

Float awards and their sponsoring organizations are as follows: first place, $1,000, IUP Alumni Association; second place, $900, Indiana Mall Association; third place, $800, Co-op Store; fourth place, $700, Student Government Association; fifth place, $600, Foundation for IUP; and sixth place, $500, American Water.

Renda Broadcasting will be broadcasting live from the parade.

The parade will also be broadcast later in October on IUP-TV.

Students making music throughout the weekend

By HEATHER BLAKE
hblake@indianagazette.net

With homecoming only a few days away, many might be thinking more about the football game and the grandeur of the floats in the parade.

But what about the bands?

Each year at homecoming, hundreds if not thousands of current students, faculty and staff, parents and alumni are entertained by the sounds of the IUP marching band during the parade and football game, and by the traditional homecoming concert performed by the concert and symphony bands and the wind ensemble that closes out the excitement of Homecoming weekend on Sunday.

But what about the bands?

More than 300 students from the university “will be making music” homecoming weekend, more than 200 of which are music majors, according to Jack Stamp, music department chairman and director of band studies.

“The marching band is “the first of all the majors” to be assessed earlier than anyone else, Stamp said.

“They have to put a show on before any professor gives a test,” he said. “They’ve always had to do that. Sometimes a game has been the weekend before school started. The band has to be ready before school starts at all.” The marching band holds its band camp approximately 10 days before the first day of classes, practicing from early in the morning until late in the evening to be completely ready for the first football game of the season.

The performances, according to Marching Band Director David Martynuik, don’t revolve around the homecoming theme of that particular year.

“It varies from year to year,” he said. “Sometimes students will suggest ideas, but I go with whatever catches my fancy.”

This year, he said, the marching band is performing a Latin show with traditional Latin music and a piece by American jazz guitarist and composer Pat Metheny, according to Stamp.

The traditional pieces are all arranged by IUP alumnus Anthony O’Toole, Stamp said.

The band will play more of the “traditional IUP standards,” such as “Hail Indiana,” during the homecoming parade, Martynuik said. The school songs and alma mater are performed during pregame as well, according to Stamp, and the main show will be performed at both half-time and postgame, “concluding with a performance of ‘Amazing Grace’ with all marching band alumni in attendance assembled with them on the field.”

Stamp said the homecoming concert, which is the first of the season for the ensemble bands, is the same with not following the theme of the weekend. It’s one of the few concerts where all three ensemble bands will perform together, and the music selection is based more on the students’ education than on homecoming.

“It’s basically so you can see every instrumentalist, or every wind and percussion player in the department. It’s the first concert so we get everybody playing,” he said. “... I won’t perform our heaviest esoteric program for this concert.

“The bands are part of their curriculum as music and music education students,” he added, “so the music that’s selected is geared toward their education. But I make sure that it’s palatable to the audience for homecoming, since that’s going to be more of a generic audience.”

Some of the pieces featured in this year’s concert include “Folk-song Suite” by Vaughan Williams, “Symphony No. 6” by Vincent Persichetti and “Dancing Day” by James Colonna, who originally is from Punxsutawney.

Stamp added that a lot of the students that are in the ensemble bands are also in the marching band.

“If their parents come up to the homecoming game, they can stay over and see (their kids) play in their indoor band, so some of this is also for the parents as well — to see their sons and daughters perform outdoors and indoors.”

The tradition of having the homecoming concert the day after the football game started approximately 15 years ago, Stamp said.

“The idea was to get alumni — especially music alumni — to stay Sunday and hear the indoor band that they probably a part of too at one time,” he said.

The homecoming concert, directed by Stamp and music professor Jason Worzybt, will take place from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday at Fisher Auditorium in the Performing Arts Center. Tickets are on sale at the HUB Ticket Office: $9 regular admission, $8 discounted and $6 for I-card holders.

BANDS IN THE PARADE

Several marching bands will participate in the homecoming parade, representing these schools: Homer-Center High School, IUP, Indiana Area Senior High School, Marion Center High School, Purchase Line High School and Saltsburg High School.

After the parade, during Pregame in the Oak Grove, there will be music by marching bands from the parade and music by a disc jockey.
Former IUP homecoming queen returning as a parade marshal

IUP News Service

There are many long-standing IUP Homecoming parade traditions: the ROTC cannon to start the parade; colorful floats reflecting each year's theme; marching bands; and classic cars with Indiana and university dignitaries.

This year's parade continues an 11-year tradition added in 1999: parade grand marshals representing the 50-year reunion class.

“The Homecoming Parade is one of the central activities of the weekend and is one that truly brings community and university together,” said Mary Morgan, Indiana University of Pennsylvania Alumni Affairs associate director.

“We developed the idea of the parade marshals as a way to honor our alumni and to showcase the long-standing and consistent support that our alumni have for their alma mater.

“It is impressive to see that 50 years or more after graduation, our alumni want to return to IUP and are proud to be part of the homecoming festivities.”

This year's parade marshals are Betty Jo Madden Carter, of Glenshaw; Don Ficco, of Johnstown; and Marjorie Turley Nelson, originally of Indiana and now of Youngwood; all members of IUP's class of 1961.

Carter, a retired elementary school teacher is the mother of two sons.

She was IUP’s 1960 Homecoming queen.

Ficco, who retired from his work at GP Utilities, was a class officer during his time at IUP and was a member of the TKE fraternity.

Nelson retired from her work in the Hempfield Area public schools in 1994 and then taught at Seton Hill University.

She has traveled extensively with IUP friends and family, and she also completed post-graduate education.

The parade marshal tradition started in 1999 with two members of the class of 1949, both of Indiana: Sam Furgiuele and the late Bob Warren.

Both men are retired faculty from IUP and achieved the rank of faculty emeritus.

Furgiuele served on the IUP Alumni Board, as president, and on the Foundation for IUP Board of Directors.
